No.2070, An Ironic Paradox of Transhumanism
Transhumanists aspire to overcome death.
Once we conquer death, it couldn't be experienced anymore.
Death would be precious but unattainable then.
In response to this fact, transhumanists may start to pursue the way to experience death,
even though we can never experience death at that time.
This can be called a "transhumanist paradox."
Groningen; 09:13, 12/23/2022

No.2071, Radical Immortality Transhumanists are exploring a way to attain immortality such as uploading our minds to computers.
But there is still a physical limitation of the method in that computer servers can be broken down.
Why don't transhumanists look for a way to upload or transform our minds to oxygen or nitrogen in the air?
Or a much more radical way could be to upload or transform our minds to dark matter in the universe.
If we accomplish it, we could say that radical immortality is actualized.
Groningen; 09:19, 12/23/2022

No.2998, Morning Serenity
It is morning serenity that enables my soul to further develop.
My soul would continue to seek a serene place forever.
I'll just follow my soul's decision.
